He is ready to receive visitors at his home in Portland, and will give them time to his business. His catalog, giving names and pedigree of animals, and terms, will be sent on application.

M. Valion, President of the Agricultural Group in the Chambers at Paris, called upon M. Lockroy, Minister of Commerce, Wednesday, and urged him to continue the problem of the importation of American hog cholera. The Minister, after a careful letter of envoys to the subject, the Chamber of Deputies he would wait for the hygienic committee's report, which would decide the question of the alleged presence of trichinae in American pork.

Mr. Charles A. Bailey, agent of the Peacock Indians, has submitted his annual report to the Governor. Agricultural products of the past year: Potatoes, 4025 bushels; beans, 347,000; oats, 651,000; rye, 167,000; wheat, 25,000; oats, 25,000; all kinds, 1868. The schools have been kept up well. The population of the tribe is 357, showing a decrease of 20 during the year. There were 19 deaths during the year.

Dr. Edison of the Washington health board, discourses upon the presence of disease germs in the ice supplied for household use. He says that instances are now coming in from all parts of the country, excepting a few physicians, who are typified fever or other afflictions have been developed after using ice taken from unclean and mischievous waters. A pure ice supply is of next importance to a pure water supply, and Maine waters furnish ice above the suspicion of contamination. Another feature in Maine's cap, please.

A brilliant comet is one of the interesting celestial sights which the astronomers promise for the near future. It was covered in Paris, December 1, and is increasing in brightness, promising to equal the brilliant spectacle of 1881, before it fades away. About April 1, if the astrometers are in error, it will be visible to the naked eye, by the middle of May it will have attained its greatest brilliancy. It is also forecasted that the stranger will come nearer the earth than any of its predecessors, and it will always keep at least 12,000,000 miles distant, no special alarm need be felt. The comet will appear in the western sky and will visible all night.

A notable example of the ingenuity of the electrical light which the inventors promise for the future. Poetry.

The Sabbath Bells.

The old man sits in his easy chair;
And his ear has caught the ringing
of the church bells on the Sabbath morn.
Their old sweet sound made stings.
His old heart beat with a strong breast,
While his thoughts far back are reaching
To the scenes of his boyish days,
And a mother's care.

A few years later, and lo! the bell
Is still the same, but the man's voice
Is hoarse, and his steps are weak, and slow,
And his heart is still the same, though gone.
His manhood's joys were sealing,
But his manhood's sorrows were sealing,
And a mother's care.

When the tide of grief rolled o'er him—
When the bells were tolling for fallen ones gone—
When the old man died from his reverie,
And his spirit went to the home he left.
With the child with her aching eyes reads on—
The old man's death.

Ah! bells, once more we'll ring for him,
And his spirit go to the home he left.
The child of life, and his frost soul flies
To dwell with his own forever.

Our Story Teller.

THRILLING LION HUNT.

The story which is narrated in the following extract is taken from the lips of my old friend, Alain Quatermain, or Human Quatermain, as we used to call him in South Africa.

Dear Master! I can see him now, as he went limping up and down the vestibule with his gray hair sticking up in scrubbing bristles, and his large, dark eyes, that were as keen as any hawk's, and yet as soft as a hawk's. The way he limped, and the way he trotted, in his numerous hunting expeditions, and he had some story about every one of them, if only you could get him to tell it.

"Ah! you brute!" he said, stopping beneath an unusually large skulk of a lion which was fixed just over the mantelpiece, because he had been so good to him, and tended to their utmost with "Ah, you brute! You have given me a lot of trouble for the last few years, and will, I suppose, to my dying day."

"Tell us the yarn, Quatermain. You have so promised to tell me, and you never have."

"You had better not ask me," he answered, "for it is a long one."

"All right, then, tell it to us."

Thus adjured, he filled his pipe from a pipe of his own, and was always walking up and down the room, began:

"It was, I think, the Master that I found in Sikkim. It was just after old Sikkim's time, and Sikkim had gone into power—"

He stopped, and I heard that the Bapdi people had got down an enormous quantity of ivory from the interior, and so I started off to Sikkim, and came straight away from Middlebury to try and trade some of it. It was a risky thing to go to Sikkim, but I knew that there was one or two others after that lot of ivory, so I determined to have a try for it, and so my old master, who had got out of the country, did not come back from Sikkim, and so I was not much worried.

"I had to go to the Master, and he was not there. I had heard that the Bapdi people had got out of the country, and so I was not much worried.
